

Memorandum for Mr. Tolson

1. Kitts had testified at the Commissioner's hearing on September 14 against [REDACTED] and other Omaha hoodlums, exhibiting a great deal of personal vindictiveness and the cross examination inflicted it was a mutual animosity. Therefore [REDACTED] considered it very unlikely that Kitts could be contacting [REDACTED] for help after his escape.

2. Dalton feels that [REDACTED] has never had any reason to fear violence at the hands of Kitts; [REDACTED] is a nervous scary individual who has the respect neither of the hoodlums nor of decent citizens. Kitts is not known to have used violence against other hoodlums.

3. There was no known connection between the Varianos and Kitts. (However [REDACTED] is a sister of Benny Parrone, operator of the Last Chance Cafe in Council Bluffs, Iowa; Parrone was a known contact of Kitts in years past.)

4. SAC Dalton feels that [REDACTED] in the past has given only half truths and those when they were too late to act on; [REDACTED] wants to play both sides of the fence.

5. In view of what he considered the remoteness of the possibility that Kitts would be contacting [REDACTED] SAC Dalton considered it more worthwhile to supervise the handling of other leads, contact informants and generally direct and coordinate the case from the office to get maximum coverage on all possible contacts of Kitts as quickly as possible; also to review the Kitts case file to identify all old contacts and leads; also to handle phone inquiries from the press, law enforcement agencies and the Bureau.

Factors which should have indicated the presence of Kitts at the Variano residence was not too remote a possibility were as follows:

1. When Kitts was at large last February or March he did actually contact [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] furnished information to Bureau Agents although he did not disclose fully all facts regarding the contact.

2. It was quite unusual that [REDACTED] should receive a call from the Varianos to come over to the house immediately just a few hours after the escape of Kitts. Especially significant was the urgency of the request and that he received two phone calls.

KITTS answered all questions fully with the exception of those pertaining to [redacted] and BENNIE BARONE. It is noted that investigation of the Omaha Office indicates that both of these men have received silver money from KITTS and associates, same being from various bank burglaries. KITTS' apparent reason for not discussing BARONE is close personal friendship. With regard to [redacted] it is apparently KITTS' sentiments that he will will lose $5500.00 if he causes [redacted] to be prosecuted at this time. [redacted] allegedly placed this amount in escrow at Knoxville, Tennessee, for KITTS, to be used in a "fix" of the Federal impersonation charge against him there.

SA ELMER L. JACOBSEN, who conducted this interview, received the impression that KITTS is proud of the efficient way in which he testified in U. S. Commissioner's Court, Omaha, September 14, 1951, just before he escaped from the Nebraska State Penitentiary authorities. For the information of the various United States Attorneys, KITTS did a masterful job in handling the cross examination questions of various defense counsels
